Customer Reviews

Kathleen is a retired college teacher. She has won several awards for her writing, and for children's radio programming. She lives in east Tennessee with her husband.

Kathleen Fearing reaches into the heart of a young Nigerian girl in 1700; feels her emotions - her love for her father, her seeking approval from her mother; her resentment of her sisters; her fear when the slavers come for her entire village. Adisa learns to weave a basket from all the important moments of her young life, and she does it very well.
