And not only that, Australia is home to Ethan and Ella's aunt, uncle, and cousin. The twins dive right into the water for some snorkeling at their cousin's beach house, and while they're exploring, they come across a watch that's still ticking. Whose is it? Then they hear reports of fishermen illegally taking coral from the reefs nearby. Could Ethan and Ella be on the trail of a coral thief? Harper Paris loves to travel. Her favorite cities in the world are Paris (like her name!) and New York City. She has collected many souvenirs on her travels, including a good-luck coin from Japan and a reindeer-horn pendant from Sweden. She also loves mysteries. When she was a kid, she read

Hardy Boys and Nancy Drew books after bedtime with a flashlight. She now lives with her family (including two cats and a bunny, who are not good travelers) in Ithaca, New York. Marcos Calo has worked as a professional artist for more than fourteen years. He has worked in different fields including illustration, animation, and comic books. He lives with his wife and daughter in A Coruña, a small Spanish town by the seaside.

The Mystery at the Coral Reef 2> 2> “That girl’s going to fall off the bridge!” Ella Briar shouted. Her twin brother, Ethan, looked up. The Sydney Harbor Bridge gleamed against the bright blue sky. At the top of the massive bridge was a girl peering over the side. How did she get all the way up there? And then Ethan saw that there were other people with her. Lots of other people. “It’s okay, kids. You can actually climb to the top of the bridge,” their father, Andrew, explained. “The view is supposed to be great!” their mother, Josephine, added. “Wow!” Ella gazed out at the skyline of downtown Sydney and at the sailboats that dotted the harbor. The view from the top of the bridge probably was great. But she couldn’t imagine being up that high. She’d had enough of high places after Machu Picchu! Machu Picchu was an ancient Incan city in Peru that was thousands of feet in the air. The Briars had spent some time there before flying off to Australia. Australia was the seventh stop on their trip around the world. Mrs. Briar was a travel writer. She was writing about their adventures for their hometown newspaper, the Brookeston Times. The twins were excited to be in Australia. It was beautiful and warm, plus everyone spoke English, which meant that it was easy to communicate. Best of all, they were driving up the coast tomorrow to visit their aunt Julia, their uncle Owen, and their cousin Harry. “Who’s hungry for some Balmain bugs?” Mr. Briar called out. “Bugs?” Ethan and Ella gasped in horror. Mr. Briar laughed. “They’re not actually bugs. They’re a kind of lobster. I thought we could check out a seafood restaurant for lunch. And after lunch, we’ll go there.” Mrs. Briar pointed to a white building that jutted out into the bay. Ethan squinted. The building looked like a row of stegosaurus spikes. “What is it?” “It’s the Sydney Opera House. We’ll do a backstage tour and then stay for the opera,” replied Mrs. Briar. “What about the aquarium?” asked Ella. “Hannah’s family went there last summer. She said it was awesome!” Hannah was Ella’s best friend back in Brookeston. “I wish we could fit that in. But we won’t have time today. And we’re leaving Sydney first thing tomorrow morning,” said Mrs. Briar. Ella pouted. Ethan was disappointed, too. He had really wanted to experience some real live sea creatures while they were in Australia! Hopefully there would be another chance for that.

my 4yo grand daughter just loves having this series of stories read to her...let's her go to many different places without leaving the comfort of her bedroom...i can't wait till she's old enough to read them to herself...BUT having lots of fun in the mean time...highly recommend..she has asked me to get her every book in the series..she just loves the stories.

My son doesn't like reading but he was into this book

Easy for my 7 year old to read and very interesting!

Great book for younger kids

NICE BOOCK!

For their next adventure on their homeschooling trip around the world, twins Ella and Ethan are off to Australia. When their cousin takes them snorkeling at night, they discover suspicious activity just off the coast and realize they might be on the trail of some coral thieves. This is a wonderful installment in the Greetings from Somewhere series. The entwined mysteries provide enough suspense to keep young readers guessing, and the details of the setting will likely make many readers want to visit the Australian coast while also teaching them a little something about the area. The large font, plentiful illustrations, and fairly simple wording make this good for those who are new to chapter books. Ella and Ethan do refer to previous adventures, which makes it more difficult -- though not impossible -- to read the books out of order.

Great book to read with my 9 year old!
