Customer Reviews

It is always exciting to receive a new set of exam pieces, to work out suitable combinations with individual pupils in mind, and to judge what would benefit them most in the time span of the exam, and towards their further progress. But one often finds limitations within the choice of the repertoire itself, and a knowledge that long before the sell-by date is up, certain apathy could have set in because of these very restrictions. However I am happy to say, no, truly delighted to propose that this is not the case in the pieces set for this grade. Even within the selected list there is enough contrast of style and content to enable a teacher, and thereby each candidate, sufficient scope for complete satisfaction, and for the pupil, the means towards a rewarding and necessary music and technical development.
