Grade 4-8-Though by no means an exhaustive survey, this nifty book is filled with trivia about the accomplishments of girls and women throughout the ages. After opening with a day-by-day calendar of events in women's history, Hartman divides the information into topical sections, including chapters on American history, sports, literature, science, and careers. Famous women are highlighted throughout the pages, from political leaders past and present to the first woman to win an Olympic gold for skiing. There are also scattered bits of advice about health issues and relationships, as well as interesting tidbits about love and romance, mythological characters, and fashion trends. Readers will enjoy thumbing through this fact-packed text in much the same way they enjoy browsing "The World Records" books. Holly Hartman is an editor at Information Please, which publishes several annual almanacs, including the Time for Kids/Information Please Almanac. Information Please also produces Factmonster.com, an award-winning childrens Web site, and Infoplease.com. Information Please was an American radio quiz show, created by Dan Golenpaul, which aired on NBC from May 17, 1938 to June 25, 1948. The title phrase was contemporarily used to request information such as directory assistance and time of day from telephone operators. The series was moderated by Clifton Fadiman (1904–1999). A panel of experts would attempt to answer questions submitted by listeners. If the panelists were stumped, the questioner earned five dollars and a complete edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica. As the years went by, the prize money increased accordingly.
