Jennifer Traig has a Ph.D. in Literature, which is surprising, because in school she spent far more time crafting than studying. She lives, writes, and crafts in San Francisco.

Great Information and pictures for a young girl interested in this kind of thing

My twin 9 year old daughters loved this book. Took them to craft store and they had a great weekend.

this book is full of excellent ideas that make wonderful gifts. i think this book is more targeted towards creative teens who do lots of arts and crafts. for example, not every idea in the book is completely spelled out on what to do, and there arent a lot of pictures to help. someone who is making these things needs to know how to improvise and not always go by the book. also, consider the book more of a springboard of ideas to help you get started. i made the magazine beach tote for a friend, but i mostly just used the ideas and improvised a little. plus i had to buy more materials because the instructions were wrong. some of the ideas in the book were kind of dumb, just things that you dont need a book to tell you how to do, but other than that its got great ideas that you can really personalize for yourself or for others.

This book is chock full of creative, inventive, fun ideas. It's a great activity book for pre-teens and the accessories you can make are really great.

this book has some cute ideas but alot of them are impractical such as covering school folders with astroturf and pompoms, lining locker walls with fur, or wearing eiffel tower keychains as earrings

I loved this book! SO many wonderful accessories! I really love the first craft, the cuff bracelet thing. I made about a million! I love it, love it, love it!!!!!!!
